Hinshaw's Ambrose McCall joined the Greg and Dan Show to discuss legal issues currently at play involving social media giants such as Facebook and Twitter. He begins the segment by explaining the application of the First Amendment, and how that ultimately impacts privately employed individuals. McCall then discusses what's at stake for Google in a privacy violation lawsuit filed earlier this month. The suit alleges that the tech giant's "incognito" mode still tracks users. In closing, McCall returns to a topic he previously covered on the show—content moderation and freedom of speech on social media.
