About Lily

Lily represents financial services clients in commercial disputes, including supporting banks, lenders, and servicers as they navigate contract issues, operational challenges, and other emerging areas of risk. She also advises on creditors' rights and post-judgment enforcement matters, helping her clients evaluate exposure, respond to disputes, and resolve matters efficiently.

Before joining the firm, Lily gained experience in intellectual property and art-related legal issues through internships at organizations focused on copyright, technology, and the art market. That background strengthened her research skills and her ability to translate complex material into clear, practical analysis, tools she now brings to her work in the financial services space.
