About Victor

Drawing on his two decades of litigation experience, Victor focuses his practice on matters facing the financial services sector. He represents mortgage lenders, servicers, and other financial institutions in consumer financial services litigation, as well as real estate and general commercial litigation. He also handles title insurance defense and contested mortgage foreclosure litigation.

Victor believes that information is invaluable, and works closely with clients to ensure that they are appropriately involved at all phases of the litigation process, from matter inception to resolution. His solutions are both creative and tailored to meet his clients' unique challenges and objectives.
