About Lexi

Lexi defends businesses of all sizes in litigation, representing clients in premises liability, product liability, general and commercial disputes, construction defects, and environmental matters. Clients value Lexi's tenacity and preparation, ensuring readiness for litigation's challenges. She often serves as lead counsel for general litigation matters.

With more than 15 years of litigation and arbitration experience, Lexi handles civil litigation, class actions, and multidistrict litigation at both the trial and appellate levels. Her work spans serious workplace injuries, property damage, business interruption, complex construction, commercial disputes, and first-party property damage claims. She also represents professionals in a range of errors and omissions policy matters, and manages cases involving admiralty and maritime issues.

Lexi has represented industrial clients in toxic tort litigation in numerous occupational disease lawsuits, including asbestos-related diseases, benzene, ethyl acrylate, hydrogen sulfide, and other chemical exposures.
