About Eric

Drawing on his complex litigation background and aerospace law experience, Eric represents clients in claims involving the operation of airplanes and helicopters. He handles a wide range of cases arising out of domestic and foreign aerospace accidents and mishaps, as well as business and insurance disputes involving participants in aerospace and related industries.

Eric's work includes representing product and component manufacturers, maintenance facilities, airlines and other operators, pilots, air traffic control facilities, and insurers. Eric's experience as an aircraft owner and pilot enhances his ability to address sophisticated technical issues with clients and experts, which he simplifies for counseling and adjudication. Eric additionally counsels and represents clients in business disputes arising in aerospace, insurance, and other fields. As such, Eric offers a general practice serving clients in various industries and businesses.
