About Brady

Brady concentrates his practice on representing clients in complex business and insurance coverage disputes, particularly commercial and insurance matters. He also focuses on complex litigation and alternative dispute resolution involving domestic, cross-border, and international disputes spanning several industries, including commercial, corporate, securities, and cryptocurrency.

Before joining Hinshaw, Brady handled international and cross-border disputes and international arbitration, specifically commercial and investor-state cases. While earning his law degree, Brady represented his alma mater as a visiting scholar at Bucerius Law School in Hamburg, Germany, where he studied under prominent international arbitration scholars.
