About Brian

Brian counsels banks, fintechs and other non-bank lenders, and businesses offering financial products on a range of consumer financial services issues. Drawing on more than two decades of experience as both a litigator and a transactional attorney, Brian advises on legal and regulatory matters that can arise in a variety of contexts, including product development, marketing, origination, servicing, operations, examinations, investigations, enforcement actions, and litigation.

As a former assistant general counsel and executive director at JPMorgan Chase, Brian provides practical solutions to mitigate risk and enhance the customer experience. He employs a deep working knowledge across a host of consumer finance products, including installment loans, credit cards, auto loans, student loans, mortgage loans, deposit accounts, rent-to-own, buy-now-pay-later, and payments.

Brian is well-versed in a range of laws and regulations, including Truth in Lending Act (TILA), Consumer Financial Protection Act (CFPA), Federal Trade Commission (FTC) Act, Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), Electronic Fund Transfer Act (EFTA), Consumer Leasing Act (CLA), E-SIGN, Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA), Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (SCRA), Military Lending Act (MLA), various FTC regulations, and state laws governing retail installment sales, sweepstakes, and unfair, deceptive, and abusive acts and practices.
