Craig T. Liljestrand, a Chicago-based partner in the Product Liability practice area at Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP, authored the article, “Lack Of Specific Links To Asbestos Exposure Dooms Ship Worker’s Case,” published by the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin on May 31, 2016. This article is part of Mr. Liljestrand’s monthly column with the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin “Toxic Tort Talk.”

The article discusses how The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in Pace vs. Air & Liquid Systems Corp., et al. (No. 14-2416) (4th Cir. 2016) recently affirmed the granting of summary judgment to a variety of equipment manufacturers for different reasons. Applying the “frequency, regularity and proximity” test to the Plaintiff’s case, the Court picked apart the Plaintiff’s supporting facts and evidence on exposure. Paramount to the Court’s decision was the Plaintiff’s failure to show that the equipment he worked on (i.e. pumps, valves and turbines) actually contained asbestos. Mr. Liljestrand concludes the article explaining that based off the factors discussed in the case, the appeals court affirmed the trial court’s grant of summary judgement in favor of all defendants.
