Wendy Chang, a Los Angeles-based partner in the Lawyers for the Profession[®] group at Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP, was quoted in the article “Cal. Rules Redo Marries Borrowed Rules With Old and New” published by Bloomberg BNA in the ABA/BNA Lawyers’ Manual on Professional Conduct on July 11, 2016.

The article discusses that the California State Bar is seeking feedback on a big set of proposed revisions to the rules governing lawyer conduct in the Golden State. The proposed rules mostly track the numbering of the Model Rules and borrow some of the substance of the ABA models, but rework or add to several rules and preserve some of California’s current rules, including its strict confidentiality standards. Ms. Chang is quoted as saying “The Rules Revision Commission has worked extremely hard in order to have these proposed rules ready for public comment this summer, [t]hey are the result of rigorous debate and thoughtful analysis.” Ms. Chang made it clear she was speaking with Bloomberg BNA only in her personal capacity and not on behalf of the commission.
