Hinshaw attorney Terry McAvoy had an article published in today’s DRI Professional Perspectives newsletter. McAvoy discusses the recent Seventh Circuit decision in West Bend Mutual Ins. Co. v. Schumacher, a case in which the plaintiff, a worker’s compensation insurer, had filed a legal malpractice action against former defense counsel alleging negligence for having admitted liability when defending a workers’ compensation claim. He explains how the Seventh Circuit affirmed the district court’s dismissal for failure to state a claim and held that the plaintiff failed to allege plausibly that it lost an actual, specific and meritorious defense in the underlying workers’ compensation proceeding.
