Anthony Davis' most recent authored article in the New York Law Journal is titled “New Ethics Opinion on Litigation Funding Gets It Wrong.” In this edition of his regular NYLJ column, Davis—along with Anthony Sebok, Professor of Law and Co-Director of the Jacob Burns Center for Ethics in the Practice of Law, Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law—addresses how the New York City Bar Ethics Committee’s Formal Opinion 2018-5: Litigation Funders’ Contingent Interest in Legal Fees incorrectly interprets New York Rule of Professional Conduct (RPC) 5.4.

Based on the reasons the authors outline in the article, they call on the committee to withdraw Opinion 2018-5 for reconsideration and recommend that the committee engage in an “extensive process of consultation that would include litigation funders and the wider profession.”
